ANALYST – HONG KONG

Do you like Jigsaw Puzzles?

An exciting opening with excellent career prospects for a candidate with the right combination of common sense, world-trade commercial awareness, an enquiring mind, outgoing and engaging personality and excellent communication skills.

What's the job?

We give our clients incisive knowledge so that they can make smarter decisions – specifically we provide in-depth reports on companies acting in sectors, or geographic regions, that do not provide much publicly accessible information (for example international shipping, commodity trading, offshore registrations, “brass-plate” corporations). It is our job to provide a picture – we identify what pieces of the information jigsaw are easily available and we get them. We then decide what pieces we are missing and go out and find them. We never get them all, of course, but we gather enough to make the picture become real enough to make informed decisions. Our international clients (including top 4 accountancy firms, oil majors, law firms, international insurers) would operate in an information vacuum without us.

Who would suit this job?

Someone who knows (or who wants to know) how the world works, who wants to know why companies do what they do and what they would need to do it. Someone who can construct a theoretical P&L from operational data. A pragmatist. Detail orientated but still retaining a big picture perspective. Successful colleagues have backgrounds from accountancy, academia, shipping operations and insurance and purchasing but each shares the key personality traits of an enquiring mind, doggedness, lateral thinking, excellent written and verbal communication skills and an interest in world affairs.

What would you get?

Real-world research methodology
A deep knowledge of international trade from macro trade flows to individual cargo transactions
Experience in insurance and maritime practice, trade finance, international trade documents and commercial transactions
Supportive team

On-the-job training, visa extension, medical insurance, competitive remuneration, study advancement support will be offered. Work on weekdays.
